Good morning Greenwaves, today is Tuesday October 27th
Today's Schedule is Group B

The Hawaiian Cultural Fact of the week is that the stars served as guideposts during the nights at sea, but navigators relied on many other skills and observations to guide their vessels during daylight and times of overcast skies. Ocean swells are a steady indication of direction that can be read when nothing is visible overhead. Swells, as opposed to local waves travel beyond wind systems that create them.
